

involved in plays. He participates more with classmates. He received a student of the month certificate this month for his band intermediate class. He plays the trumpet but he is also interested in the drums. At home he helps more even though he still gets reminders to do his chores. He does not throw as many fits to do the work as he used to. He respects his siblings more. He is a more loveable child. He is learning to cook. When he knows his h.w. is not done he comes home to do it. He brings home daily reports from school. At church he serves and behaves better. In general he has changed for the better. Keep up the good work Pedro ☺

For me the program opened my eyes. I participated in the Parent Project class where I learned how I was emotionally putting him on a roller coaster. My mood was his mood. I learned TEASPOT instead of taking it all from him, so he had nothing to look forward to. I try to listen to him more. I don't loose my temper as easily. Sure I have my days too, but I go back and start again. I know that I need help too but I also know that with the parenting chain, I can always find someone as support. All in all I am learning to communicate with my growing son ☺
